FOR NORTH CAROLINA ESTATE & GUARDIANSHIP ATTORNEYS

Know what's due on every estate file, and why.

CourtDelta Estates reads the NC court docket for every estate, guardianship and trust file you track, every morning. It shows what's due and why, flags what's overdue, and emails you when the clerk acts.

1

Shows what's due, and why

Inventories, annual and final accounts and deficiency-notice answers, each dated from the statute or the clerk's own order.

2

Flags what needs attention

Overdue, due in 7 days and due in 30 days, at a glance. Deficiency notices stay open until you mark them answered.

3

Emails you when it matters

Clerk activity the next morning, date changes with the reason, and reminders 30, 14 and 3 days out. Copies go to your team.

Founding firms: 30-day free trial, then 35% off for 12 months

WHY IT'S DIFFERENT

It reads the documents, not just the docket, and shows its work.

Every date links to the docket entry, order or statute that set it. Documents are read twice and compared; when the record doesn't settle a date, it asks you instead of guessing.

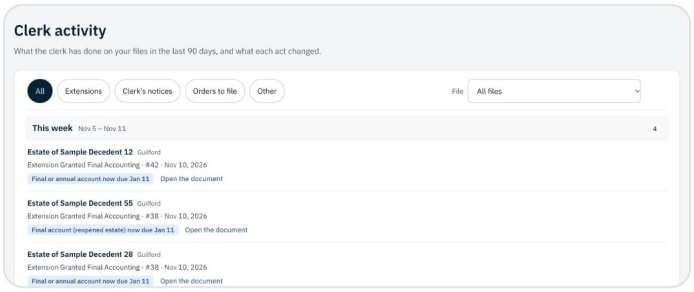

The due date, read from the clerk's signed order, with every step that set it.

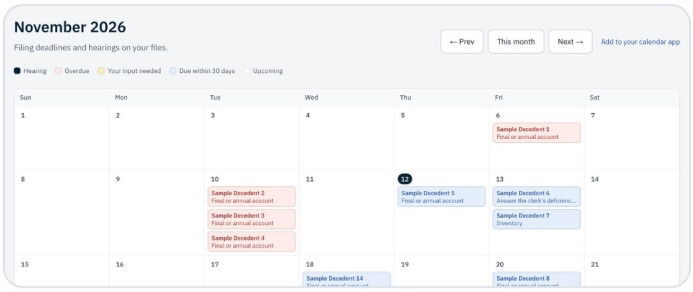

"Why this date?": the clerk's order, the docket entry and the G.S. section behind it.

What the docket alone misses: real NC files

What happened	What the docket showed	What CourtDelta did
Extension filed with a blank proposed order; the clerk's signed order added two days later	"Order to Extend Time", no date	Read the signed order: new date Dec 30
More time for a bond form, docketed as "Extension Granted Final Accounting"	Looked like the account was extended	Read the motion, kept the real Apr 30 date and asked the attorney
New guardian took over after the prior guardian was discharged on a final account	Six old "missed" accounts	Closed out the prior years; showed only the new guardian's two items
Clerk's deficiency notice docketed under an extension name	Nothing about a response	Read the notice and its respond-by date: Dec 14

Clerk activity. Every order, notice and extension on your files, and what each one changed.

Calendar. Every deadline and hearing by month, and an export to your own calendar app.

Examples are real NC files, described without names.

THE PROBLEM IT SOLVES

The docket doesn't say what's due. It lists entries, not that the account is now due Dec 30.

Checking takes staff time. At 5–10 minutes per file a week, 50 files is 18–36 hours a month.

Entries are often mislabeled. A bond extension can be docketed as "Final Accounting".

A missed account is costly. An order to file, a show cause hearing, time you can't bill.

How do I know the dates are right?

Every date shows its source. Documents are read twice; if they disagree, it asks you. Your own copies stay the final word.

The court already emails me.

A notice says something happened. CourtDelta says what it means and when your next filing is due.

Is my client information safe?

Docket data is public record. Your notes are private, never emailed and never sent to AI. Nothing is sold.

Start free today on your own files.

Free trial, no card: 30 days for founding firms, 14 days for everyone else, up to 15 files. Enter your State Bar number and we'll find your estate files.
